Detailed programme:

What is The Research School in Clinical Medicine (Forskerskolen i Klinisk Medisin)?

The Research School in Clinical Medicine is an arena for PhD students from the Department of Clinical Medicine (K1), Department of Clinical Science (K2) and Helse-Bergen to socialise and present their own research to fellow students. The research school also organises courses that may be included as part of the mandatory training component of the PhD program and a seminar series where current research from the faculty is presented.
